INSTRUCTIONS

Press pie dough into a 9-inch pie plate. Cook according to package instructions. Cool.

In a double boiler or in the microwave, melt butter and chocolate together. Cool.

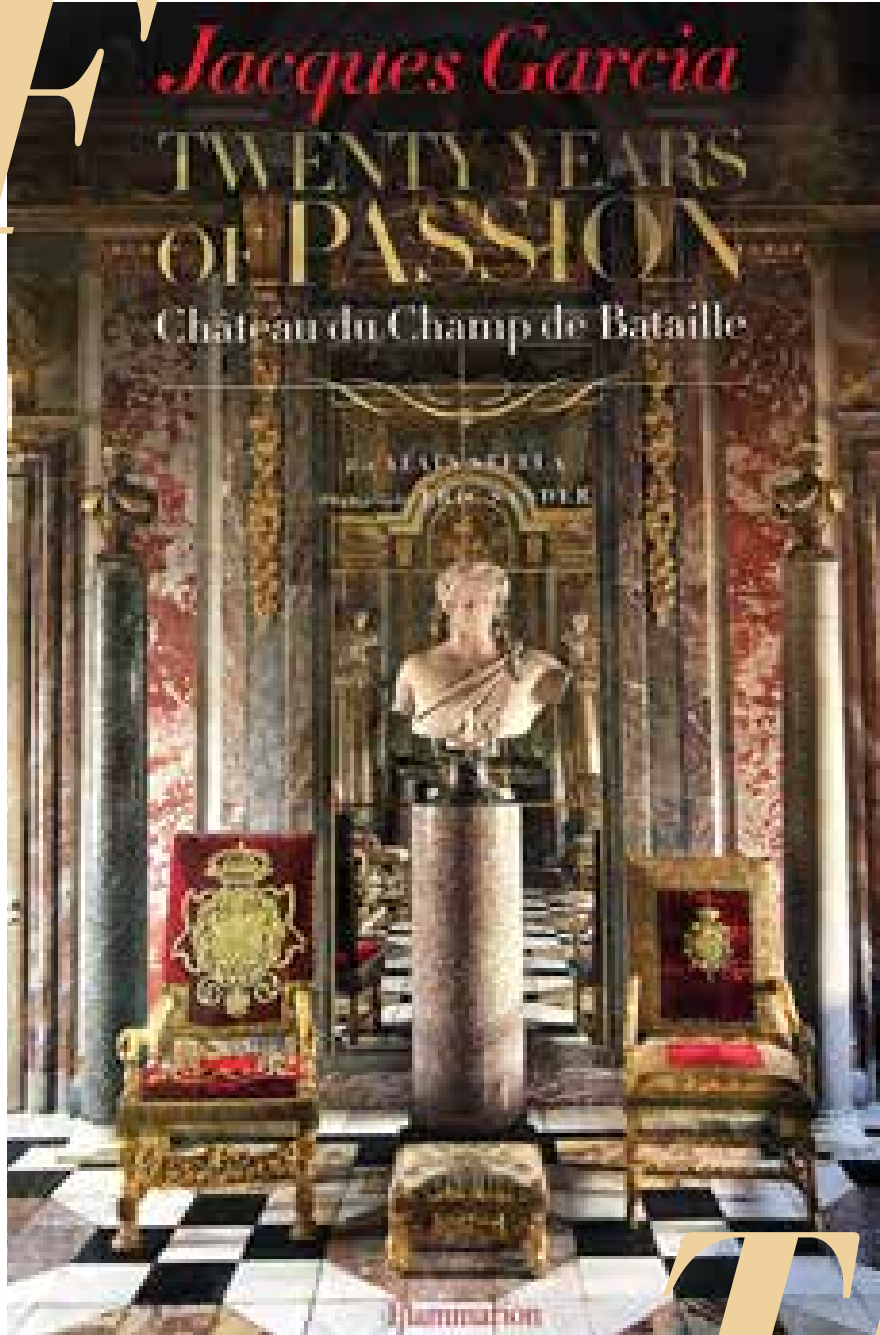

In a medium bowl, mix sugar, flour, and salt. In a separate bowl, whisk eggs, egg yolks, cream, and vanilla extract. Add egg mixture to sugar mixture and whisk to blend.

Add chocolate mixture to egg-and-sugar mixture. Whisk to blend. Pour into pie shell. Bake at 325° for 35–40 min. Cool completely on wire rack.

Serve with whipped cream, optional.

OF

Twenty Years of Passion is an exquisite showcasing of Jacques Garcia's Chateau du Champ de Bataille, a world-class example of 17th and 18th century French architecture on the western side of Normandy, France.

Inside this publication, you will find a sophisticated display of Jacques Garcia's ninety-four acre gardens, among several stately interiors. Twenty Years of Passion is a rare and splendid source of inspiration for contemporary rooms such as Garcia's bedrooms and kitchen, and a source of otherworldly fascination for unique rooms such as the Cabinet of Curiosities or Pavilion of Dreams. This display of the Chateau du Champ de Bataille is a gem for interior designers with an affinity for French design, and a source of captivating enchantment for all those who open the book.

FRANÇOISE PAVIOT

Françoise Paviot
Cocktail Napkin,
$5.00

Françoise Paviot of Lyons, France, founded her brand of upscale paper products in 1992. Previously working in her husband's packaging-waste processing business, Françoise used her knowledge of paper products to curate her own line of deluxe paper merchandise.

From napkins to wrapping paper, her line of durable and unique paper products were truly en vogue throughout Lyons.

The popularity of her business soon outgrew the whimsical boutique she had in the 6th arrondissement of Lyons. Françoise then expanded to Corbas, handing the company down to her two daughters soon after, who still run the business today.

The quality of Françoise Paviot's napkins goes unmatched. From her vibrant designs to the evident durability of the napkin, Françoise's napkins are an elite dinnerware essential.

We carry both cocktail and dinner napkins so you can add a charming yet luxurious essence to your table, or carry your champagne flute in undeniable style and elegance at happy hour.

With seven different designs, you are sure to find a pattern that complements your tabletop perfectly. Stop in the store today to pick up a set of Françoise Paviot's napkins before they're gone.

DID YOU KNOW?

THE HISTORY OF THE SUNHAT

The sunhat: it's a seasonal accessory nearly as ubiquitous as socks and shoes. The straw sunhat has been an iconic summertime staple since the 1800's, and a hot-weather necessity since the Middle Ages.

But I must admit, it is unusual that such an exotic item remains omnipresent in fashion for centuries on end. So, where did the sunhat come from, and what makes it so timeless?

Originating within Europe and Asia, the sunhat's original purpose was to protect outdoor laborers' from the damaging effects of the sun. The hats were largely made of straw, giving it the obvious and persistent label of "straw hat".

However, it wasn't until President Theodore Roosevelt was photographed sporting a Panama hat in 1906 that the straw sunhat made it's epochal fashion debut.

Around the mid-1900's, the sunhat fully evolved into a statement of high fashion rather than a practical sun shield. The first straw sunhat appeared on the runway in 1965, paving the way for it's infinite appearances at runway shows across the world.

Most recently, French designer Jacquemus challenged the wide-brim straw hat with his La Bomba hat, an oversized sunhat with a twelve-inch brim in his 2018 Summer collection. Like emphatic fashion statements go, this hat is listed for upwards of $700 in retail.

However you decide to adorn your crown while soaking up the last few harsh rays of sun this August, enjoy the dog days with protection from the sun so you can keep your skin looking baby-soft.
